As per claim 13, it was not found to be taught in the prior art of self-synchronously scrambling frames by encrypting the information section in accordance with a first predetermined encryption pattern and selectively encrypting the overhead sections in accordance with a second predetermined encryption pattern.

As per claim 19, it was not found to be taught in the prior art of self-synchronously scrambling means that includes control inputs with timing data that are synchronous to an overhead bit in the frame to disable the scrambling means, whereby the scrambling operations becomes modifiable.
